Chapter 37 - HIV/AIDS

KEY TERMS

- EIA (enzyme immunoassay): a blood test that can determine the presence of antibodies to HIV in the blood or saliva; a variant of this test is called enzyme linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA). Positive results must be validated, usually with Western blot test.
- HIV-1: retrovirus isolated and recognized as the etiologic agent of HIV disease
- HIV-2: retrovirus identified in 1986 in patients with AIDS in western Africa
- opportunistic infection: illness caused by various organisms, some of which usually do not cause disease in people with normal immune systems
- Kaposi's sarcoma: malignancy that involves the epithelial layer of blood and lymphatic vessels
- wasting syndrome: involuntary weight loss consisting of both lean and fat body mass
- Western blot assay: a blood test that identifies antibodies to HIV and is used to confirm the results of an EIA or ELISA test

What is HIV infection and AIDS?

- The HIV antibody test, an enzyme immunoassay became available in 1984 allowing for early diagnosis of the infection before onset of symptoms.
- Gay, bisexual, and other men who have sex with men remain the population most affected and account for 27% of the population but 67% of the new infections.
- AIDS-related deaths dropped by 19% globally over the period from 2004 to 2009 alone, and 53% of pregnant women living with HIV had access to antiretroviral medicines to prevent transmission of HIV to their infants.

How is it transmitted?

- Inflammation and breaks in the skin or mucosa result in the increased probability that an HIV exposure will lead to infection.
- (HIV-1) is transmitted in body fluids (blood, seminal fluid, vaginal secretions, amniotic fluid, and breast milk) that contain free viruses and infected CD4+ T cells.
- Mother-to-child transmission of HIV-1 may occur in utero, at the time of delivery, or through breast-feeding, but most perinatal infections are thought to occur after exposure during delivery.
- HIV is not transmitted through casual contact.

Risk Factors

- Blood and blood products can transmit HIV to recipients.
- However, the risk associated with transfusions has been virtually eliminated as a result of voluntary self-deferral, completion of a detailed health history, extensive testing, heat treatment of clotting factor concentrates, and more effective virus inactivation methods.

Chart 37-1 Risks Associated With HIV Infection and AIDS

- Sharing infected injection drug use equipment
- Having sexual relations with infected individuals (both male and female)
- Infants born to mothers with HIV infection and/or who are breast-fed by HIV-infected mothers
- People who received organ transplants, HIV-infected blood, or blood products (especially between 1978 and 1985)
